OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY FACULTY MEMBER RECOGNIZED FOR WORK ON NEUROETHICS

Omaha, Nebraska (February 6, 2006) --- Occupational Therapy faculty member Dr. Ivelisse Lazzarini was recognized in the November issue of the Stanford NeuroEthics Newsletter for her chapter entitled Neuroethics: The New Millenium View in Educating for Moral Action: A Sourcebook in Health and Rehabilitation Ethics. Educating for Moral Action was published in 2005 by FA Davis and is a compilation of manuscripts produced at an Ethics Institute sponsored by the Office of Interprofessional Scholarship, Service and Education in 2003.

The chapter by Dr. Lazzarini was completed under a postdoctoral fellowship at Saint Louis University prior to becoming an Assistant Professor at Creighton University Medical Center.

Dr. Lazzarini currently teaches Neuroscience, Occupational Patterns in Culture and Neuro-Occupation courses in the Department of Occupational at Creighton University Medical Center.
